FOREWORD

BY THE DEAN, FACULTY OF LAW AND GOVERNMENT

It is with great pleasure that I write this message for the fourth publication of the HELP Law Review.

The HELP Law Review, as a refereed journal, has helped us academics in this young institution of 27 years to develop our research and to gain recognition as a University with strong academic standing.

It is our fervent hope that the research contributions from the academics in the Law Reviews will set a good example to our students. Cultivating research habits in students and academics alike is indeed a daunting task but the accomplishment of producing the HELP Law Review and the HELP Student Law Journal says it all - Res Ipsa Loquitur. Research and development markedly differentiates a teaching institution from a University and we have evolved into a University with a strong teaching and research culture.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the contributors and to thank the Editorial team for their hard work.

To accomplish great things, we must not only act, but also dream; not only plan, but also believe.
